Academic Success Group for College Students

By request! We are pleased to announce that we are offering a new service for our college students who need to learn some more advanced study skills as well as receive some help staying on track through their school terms. New students will receive a copy of Jan's The CEO of Self: An Executive Functioning Workbook, which will be used to teach higher order EF skills needed to be successful in college. We will also go over pragmatics such as group work, reading a syllabus and copying important dates to calendars, talking to professors, asking for accommodations, and breaking down large tasks.

Students who take this class can access our Study Hall hours as part of the cost of the class. Once students have mastered these skills, they may attend Study Hall on an 'a la carte' basis, each term.

↳ Academic Success Term Kickoff Class

This three-hour introduction to academic success will be run five times a year in the evening, near the start of each term. If you miss the kickoff, don't worry! We'll get you caught up at any time!

- For quarter systems: January 9, 2019; April 10, 2019; September 25, 2019
- For semester systems: January 23, 2019, August 21, 2019

↳ Drop-In Study Hall

Students who are enrolled in the term's success class can drop in, give our instructors a quick check in on how they are progressing, and get help as needed on managing workload, getting accommodations at school, contacting professors – or just use us as a quiet place to study away from distractions (with snacks, of course!). Please note that this is not subject-specific tutoring, rather support to stay on track in all classes and to develop good work habits. We will hold three study halls each week, each two hours in length.

↳ 1:1 Academic Intervention

For students who are really struggling, or are on academic probation, we offer 1:1 intervention to help the student get back on track. By appointment only and at additional cost.
